The purpose of this pharmacology study guide is to help nursing graduates work through the vast amount of pharmacological knowledge required for the NCLEX-RN® in a systematic and purposeful way. The breadth and detail of the knowledge required of pharmacological concepts often overwhelms new graduates when they are beginning their exam preparation. This guide organizes content using the current NCLEX-RN® Test Plan and provides specific strategies to address pharmacological areas of review which may challenge new graduates in their exam preparation. The guide was created by an experienced undergraduate nurse educator specializing in critical thinking development and application for high stakes exam writing. Many candidates, while studying for the NCLEX-RN®, often forgo studying pharmacological concepts in the detail required for the exam. The purpose of the modules in this Pharmacology study guide series are to:•Provide in-depth review of the major drug classes from a systems approach (e.g. respiratory, nervous system etc...) to help increase retention of key concepts and encourage application of pharmacological therapy in the context of disease management. •Summarize important information related to drug therapy and guide graduates to in-depth review of serious adverse events associated with medications. The modules will contain summary tables, review questions and exercises for key concepts. •Direct the reader to important areas for client assessment during drug therapyThis is a working pharmacology study guide, so while key information will be presented and organized for review, it is up to you to do the detailed work of content review by answering the questions and exercises in each moduleThe following resources are recommended to use with this pharmacology study guide:1.Pharmacology textbook. This resource will contain the detailed information pertaining to drug classes and specific nursing considerations related to drug therapy. 2.Drug guide. These resources contain alphabetized drug information and outline pharmacokinetic and pharmacodynamics characteristics of medications. You will find important information related to the absorption, distribution, metabolism and excretions of drugs- as well as protein binding and therapeutic index.3.An online drug repository if the resources above do not contain the information needed to answer the questions in the guide.Each module contains practice questions using NCLEX-RN® formatted questions. It is recommended that you seek additional practice questions from resources that challenge you to go into pharmacological concepts such as serious adverse events and drug-to-drug interactions in detail and test your knowledge specific nursing interventions related to drug therapy. This includes drug-to-drug interactions, specific adverse reactions due to drug therapy and the potential reactions associated with herbal therapy and conventional medications. The content will be focused on a systems approach and will direct you towards important information within each drug class. This sixth module focuses on medications affecting the Urinary and Renal System. The module begins with a summary table of differing drugs used for diuretic therapy and drugs for renal failure. Each drug class is addressed with review questions and study tips are provided throughout the module. The next section focuses on drugs influencing the urinary system including drugs for overactive bladder, urinary retention, bladder spasms, cystitis, uncomplicated pyelonephritis, complicated urinary tract infections and prophylaxis of recurrent urinary infections.
