In British author Arthur Conan Doyle's 1912 classic The Lost World, dinosaurs attack a group of explorers amid the rocks and swamps of that fantasy landscape. The novel was made into a film in 1960 produced by Irwin Allen starring Claude Rains, David Hedison, Fernando Lamas, Jill St. John, and Michael Rennie among others.

In an age of satellite technology and cheap air travel, few corners of the planet remain undiscovered. But southern Venezuela's tepuis – the sandstone table-topped mountains that inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel The Lost World – still make travellers feel like 19th-century explorers setting off into the hinterland. The Lost World is a novel released in 1912 by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle concerning an expedition to a plateau in the Amazon basin of South America where prehistoric animals, dinosaurs, and other extinct creatures still survive.

Arthur Conan Doyle's science fiction novel The Lost World is an exploration of this dangerous and exotic place where prehistoric creatures still thrive. Published in 1912, the book was inspired by H.G. Wells's novella The Country of the Blind (1904), which was also set in a secret South American valley and which appeared like much of Doyle's own work in the Strand magazine. Conan Doyle is best known for Sherlock Holmes, but his other stories like The Lost World are equally entertaining. This book has bold larger-than-life characters and an exciting narrative that holds your attention. There are interpersonal tensions, danger, and jeopardy, all of which help to make it a page-turner.

The Lost World* by Arthur Conan Doyle is the literary equivalent of the plucky and elegant Caudipteryx when placed next to the stomping, roaring Tyrannosaurus that represents the Hollywood mega-blockbusters of Jurassic Park and The Lost World. If it doesn't zip along fast enough, it might get squashed.

Doyle's The Lost World was also a clear inspiration for author Michael Crichton's books Jurassic Park and The Lost World Crichton's books had the dinosaurs recreated by scientists in laboratories and showcased as the main attraction in a wildlife park that soon spun wildly out of control.
