William Henry Fox Talbot (1800-1877), figure intellectuelle clé du milieu du XIXe siècle, est le fondateur de la photographie moderne. Son premier négatif date de 1835 il met au point ce qu'il nomme la calotypie. Le calotype ou « talbotype », breveté en 1841 par Talbot, avait pour principal avantage de permettre plusieurs tirages à partir d'un seul et même négatif. Cet œuvre extraordinaire marquant les origines de la photographie est ici présenté dans son ensemble à travers ses réalisations emblématiques mais aussi avec des exemples peu connus de ses expérimentations. Les images reflètent l'attention et les interrogations de leur inventeur tout en faisant également renaître la beauté et le mystère des objets eux-mêmes. Fascinant voyage visuel à travers les investigations de Talbot, cet ouvrage constitue une très belle introduction à l'un des pionniers de la photographie.
