Are you a fan of comedians, novelists and Television Presenters? Do you remember Clive James? If so, The Legendary Reliable Literary Critic & TV Presenter is perfect for you. Clive James was born during turbulent times, as it was 1939, the start of World War II. As a young boy, he grew up in Australia, however, during his later life he decided to move to the UK, where he became Britain’s best presenter and was the equivalence to (Johnny Carson), who was the legendary American comedian who was on television in the 1980’s! Clive James was the winner of multiple journalism and broadcasting awards, and he also served as an advisor to Prince Charles of Great Britain and Diana of Wales. His often inexpressive style reached its peak in the 1980's with the Clive James on Television program, in which he presented videos about absurd programs, particularly one of Japanese competitions called Endurance. While he was comfortable writing about intellectual and low-profile culture, his self-critical Unreliable Memories memoir was a bestseller with dozens of editions. James acted as an informal adviser to Prince Charles of Great Britain and his ex-wife, Princess Diana, some of what he wrote in an honest portrait of his friendship and Diana's popularity phenomenon after his death in a car accident in Paris in 1997.
