Ce recueil rassemble quinze textes et articles d'Einstein, écrits entre 1919 et 1950. Le premier ensemble, consacré à des articles scientifiques, traite de la physique en général et particulièrement de la théorie de la relativité. Parmi eux figurent l'un des plus anciens exposés d'Einstein, "Qu'est-ce que la théorie de la relativité ?" (1919), ainsi que l'un des articles les plus importants qu'il ait écrits, "Physique et réalité" (1936). Un deuxième groupe de textes, plus restreint, rassemble des articles consacrés à de grands savants : Newton, Kepler, Marie Curie, Max Planck, Paul Langevin et Paul Ehrenfest. Cent ans après la création de la théorie de la relativité générale, les travaux d'Einstein ont été spectaculairement remis en avant par la confirmation, en 2016, de l'existence des ondes gravitationnelles, qu'il avait prédite en juin 1916. Revenir à la source vive de sa pensée et méditer les articles où il a expliqué sa vision de la physique et de la réalité est plus que jamais nécessaire.
